ST GEORGE'S BLD NOT FOR SALE

There is no truth in the rumour that St George's Building has been sold, said Mr Lawrence Kadooric, Director of Sir Elly Kadoorle and Sons, owners of the building.

When asked by the China Mail this morning, Mr Kadooric said rumours like that have been going on for years.

"But we have no immediate plans either for reconstruction or sale at present," he added.

Kowloon tunnel

The motor tunnel to be driven through the Kowloon Hills, connecting Shatin and Kowloon Tong, will be about a mile long and will be built sufficiently large enough to enable double decker buses to use it.

The actual cutting of the tunnel will take two years to ecomplete.

Tenders for the construction of the tunnel will be called for shortly. The road tunnel scheme was announced by the Financial Secretary, Mr A. G. Clarke, when presenting the draft estimates of revenue and expenditure at the Budget meeting of the Legislative Council.

Added attraction

In his speech, the Financial Secretary made it clear that it will be some years before the road tunnel will be ready for use but, when it materialises, it will provide a route to Shatin alternative to that now in use along Nathan-road and round the Kowloon Reservoir.

The map (at right) prepared by Government shows the proposed tunnel under Lion Rock. The two dotted lines at the northern end of the tunnel indicate roadwaysone to connect with the existing Talpo-road just beyond the reservoirs and the other to link up with the main road beyond the "level crossing near Shatin town. The alignment of this road is not shown in the map because a pumping station has to be built somewhere in the area and the road's position will not be determined until then. The Lung Cheung road shown in the map is the new Kowloon foothills road. Lung Cheung means flying dragon.

The proposal which brought this project to fruition is the scheme whereby the water derived from the eastern side of the Kowloon Peninsula will be filtered at Shatin and then pumped through the Kowloon Hills, making use of the tunnel, to service reservoirs immediately to the north of the Kowloon foothills road.

An added attraction is the provision of an alternative route by which water from the Shum Chum reservoir may be delivered to the urban areas. Site formation for the filters and service reservoirs is already in progress.

The tunnel will be lange enough to accommodate three or four large water mains under a 24-foot carringeway road, The at estimated cost of driving the turinel is $5,500,000, This project is an important part of a water supply scheme which will include the construction of a 60-million gallons per day filtration plant at Shatin, with provision for this capacity to be extended to 120 million gallons per day should the investigation, at present being ended. Ambitious plan in fight against rural poverty

Government position should be stated

Glasgow, Mar. 13. Glasgow Herald urged today that the Government state its position immediately on the matter of low-priced cotton goods imported here from Hongkong and other Commonwealth areas.

"Preliminary sparring be-tween Lancashire and Hongkong about trade in cotton goods has been brisk, and promises soon to become even more vigorous, the paper said editorially in *comment on the Colony's agreement to restrict its flow of cotton goods here.

"Battle will be joined in carnest, possibly later this month, when the Cotton Board expect proposals for a new agreement," the paper added.

UNCERTAINTY

It said the current agreement was between private industries, but that the Board of Trade did help in negotiating it and "similar good offices ought to be made available again."

However, the paper continued, "there is increasing uncertainty in Lancashire where, no matter what happens about Hongkong, trade does not look like being nearly so good this year as last ...

Lancashire deserves to be fold now what is the Government's attitude to imports of cheap Commonwealth cotton goods."-

Liz Taylor—and the pace she in catching on life...

By DAVID LEWIN

AT 29, Elizabeth Taylor has been in films for 21 years, has been married four times, widowed once; she has three children and has won four Hollywood Oscar nominations for the best actress of the year.

She is the only woman to be -offered 11K$6,000,000 for appearing in a film-"Cleopatra." Now she is recovering in the London Clinic with surgeons and doctors and nurses who life again-a life which she has lived at such a pace that sheseemed never to learn how to sit back, rekex, and enjoy it all. Only in the last three years has she started to realise that there are other things than and sycophants; money and

In a bitterly revealing motoughtest role is trying to grow

Her beauty brought her fame, but she began to discern the dangers. "I had the face and the body of a mature woman." she said, "but I had the mind of a child."

During the last five months in London she has been reading, reading, reading. She is racing through books at the rate of two or three a week.

She was perfectly happy when she came to town in the summer, although ill-health dogged her. But as studio executives fretted and grumbled at the delays in starting "Cleopatra" she felt she was being made "the fall guy" for other peoples mistakes,

She knows about the English weather (after all, she was come back often enough since she went to Hollywood with her parents when the war started). She knows the original script was not right (she has seen enough bad scripts to be able to tell that). She knows that people were saying: "Of course, it is Liz-being temperamental again," and she resents it.

Problems

To understand the problems and the fascination of Elizabeth Taylor it is necessary to flash back 20 years to the time she got her first Hollywood contract -and lost it after a year. A casting director with a remarkable lack of foresight said then: "After all, she has nothing."

Her mother, a former actress, persisted and took nine-year-old Miss Taylor along to M.G.M. which specialised in the training of juveniles: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Margaret O'Brien.

From that moment until she married Mike Todd, in 1957, the studio educated her, dressed her, arranged her dates, announced her marriages and her helped to pull her through to divorces, and treated her like a valuable commodity.

NEW idea to protect teeth from decay is explored by British research dentists. It is to spray them with plastic. The aim is to seal the natural enamel—particularly in the cracks between teethfrom attack by acids and bacteria. Car manufacturers use the same principle to protect chrome fittings.

If a breakthrough can be achieved, it promises to be one of the biggest events in modern dentistry: lifelong freedom from caries. But there is a snag at present. No plastic has yet been located which will stick permanually to teeth.

Other experiments have begun to discover if CHEWING GUM can be made to armour teeth against disease. One idea is to mix an antacid into the gum, to boost the neutralising action: of saliva after meals.

At Guy's Hospital scientists have completed a series of tests on 14 children who were asked to chew gum containing fluoride.

Fluoride, now being mixed in tiny amounts with the water supplies in three areas of Britain, has been proved — in American trials_to give protection against caries. In their report to the British Dental Association, the scienclimbed rapidly into the teeth. "A chewing period of five to ten minutes should be suffi-

1962 Perth meeting may be biggest, most colourful yet

The 1962 British Commonwealth Games which Australia will stage in Perth from November 22 to December 1, 1962 and which the Queen has been invited to officially open will probably be the biggest and most picturesque ever staged. Indications are that there may be more competitors in the Australian Games than at Cardiff in 1958. At Cardiff a record total of 1,130 competitors took part in the nine sports on the programme—more than 400 above the record established at Vancouver in 1954.

The Commonwealth and West Australian Governments and the City of Perth had staked their international reputations on the Games' success. They had a common obligation to upthe British Commonwealth's prestige.

Mr Macartney sald the proposed publicity campaign should also arouse interest in Australia's migration, tourist and investment potential.

In the highly competitive world of modern soccer, most club managers secon to be considered only as good as their club's current position in the League.

The high premium placed on success is undoubtedly the chief reason for the astonishingly high casualty rate in football management. For no manager, however brilliant, can guarantee a sudden miracle to transform a struggling team into championship material.

Very occasionally-and with a degree of luck-a dramatic change may result from inspired buying of new players, _ But generally a successful team can only be built by long-term planning.

Not so easy

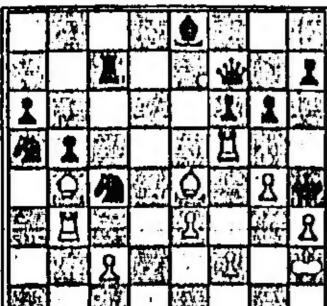

It all takes time—the one thing so many managers seem to be denied. Some directors just will not sit back patiently while the manager methodically lays a solid foundation for team-building. They want results-and quickty.

Another reason for the high turn-over rate is that the job looks so deceptively easy. Fundamentally, soccer is a simple game and it can create the false illusion that football management is equally simple,

Most fans at some time or other are convinced that they can pick a more successful team than the recognised experts. In reality, they would find that team selection is much more involved than choosing the best eleven players. Few sporting jobs are so complex and are fraught with such anxleties and
